

Stack 'em Up

A few weeks ago I showed you a picture of some workers on a roof who had stacked ladders together to climb to the top. Well, it seems there's someone out there even crazier than they are.

Direct your attention to the center ring, where you will see one crazy dude, trying to install a satellite dish on the chimney of this house. Not one to let the elements or lack of proper equipment to slow him down, he set up his ladder. "Shucks, it's too short," he said. So he got another one. "Shucks." Then another. "Double shucks." Finally, four ladders later, he reached the perfect spot and assembled his dish.

Something inside this guy's head must have screamed, "This is nuts, you're gonna kill yourself!" So why didn't he listen to his conscience? Well, until we can figure out an answer to that one, and develop an antidote, I guess we'll continue to see people get hurt while doing things like this. I sure am glad you're smart enough to know where to draw the line.
